Who is Precision Construction & Roofing?

Precision Construction was founded by a father and son and steadily grew to become a nationwide company specializing in historic slate and tile roof replacement. Precision has been recognized as an INC 500 fastest growing company and has been a Top 100 Roofing Contractor in America for the last 9 years. Precision takes pride in their knowledge of historic roofing products and their in, depth factory training on replacing historic roofs to their pre-damaged condition.

Precision Construction and their top, quality, highly trained sales staff have worked over two decades to build a company that stands for integrity and detail to workmanship. One can feel confident making the decision to use Precision knowing that you are choosing a company that cares. They will not only warrant the work they do but also have a deep sense of satisfaction knowing what a professional job they did for you, the customer.

What our Clients are saying?

We have to commend Toby as he oversaw every step of the process from dealing with the insurance company to checking the finished product! He was always available for questions and handled this project very professionally! The crew was amazing! Always leaving the work site in great condition. We would highly recommend Toby, his crew and Precision!

CHRISTINE FLAXBEARD

"Without hesitation we highly recommend Precision Construction and Roofing and Brian Lemke for any repair or replacement of roofs."

HEMA SRINIVASAN

| Overland Park, Kansas

St. John's is extremely pleased with the results of their work and feel that we have a roof that will last for years to come. We are pleased to recommend Precision Construction and Roofing and to thank John for working closely with us to successfully complete this large and difficult project.

DAVID F. KLEIN, RECTOR

| St. John's Anglican Church

Great experience! These guys are completely trustworthy. I highly recommend their service. They took the time to make sure the job met all of our needs and that the job was done right. Can't say enough about the personal touch, their expertise and great follow up.

Does your slate roof have hail damage?

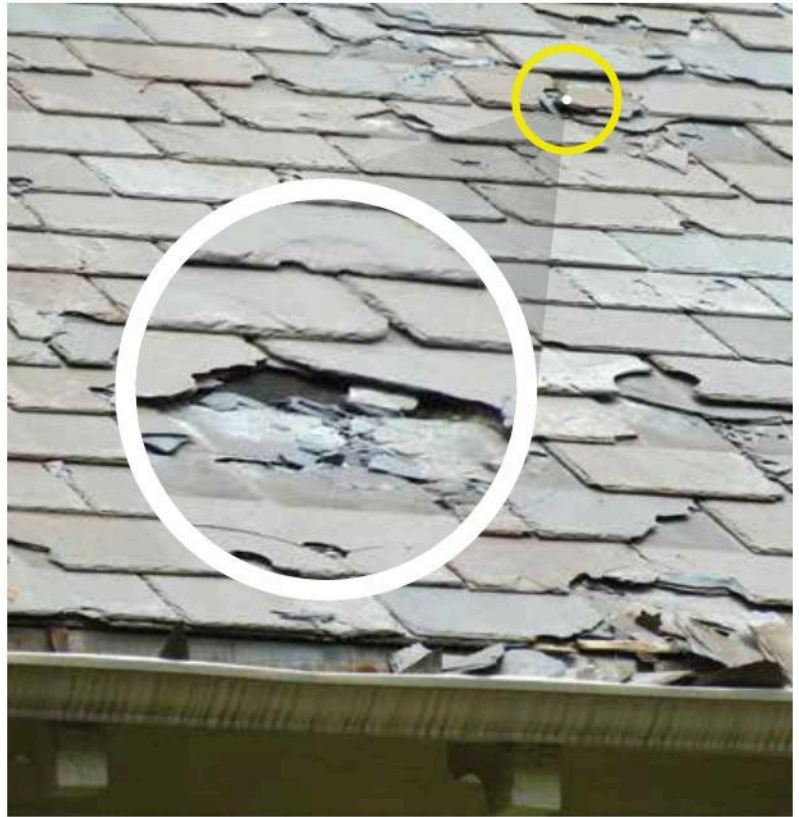

Hail damage to slate roofs is not always easily detected from the ground. Hail as small as 1" can severely damage a slate roof. Your slate roof may be punctured, cracked, or broken by hail.

Any of these conditions could be deemed functional damage if the damage is serious enough. Because slate is sedimentary stone composed of layers, hail damage may appear as slate with a portion of layers missing.

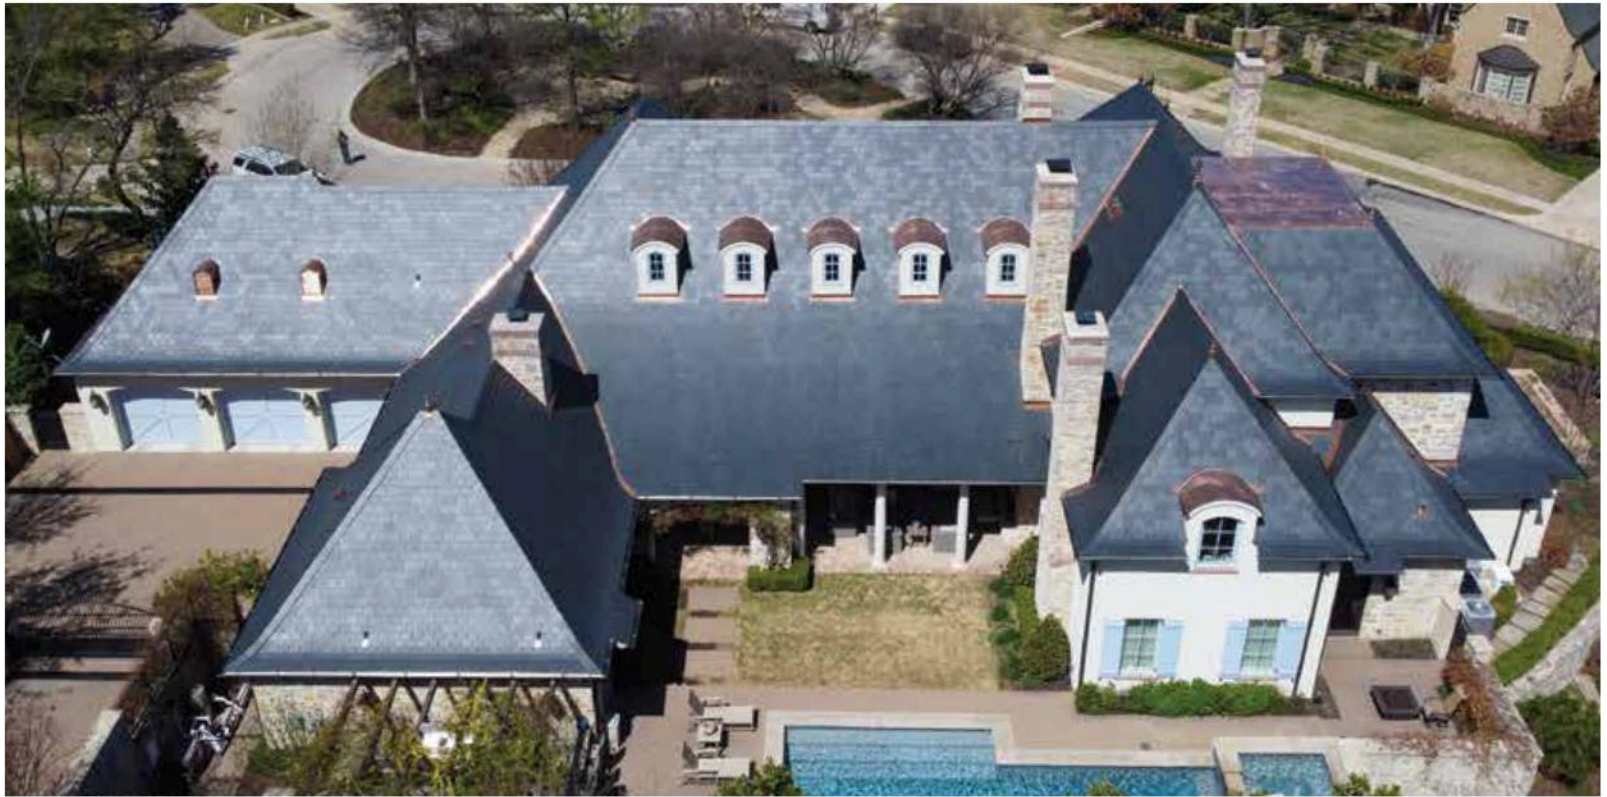

The condition would be considered functional damage only if it were severe. The only way to tell is to have your roof inspected up close by an experienced roofing contractor/inspector. Inspection from the ground will NOT yield accurate inspection results. Slate becomes soft and brittle as it ages, and old slate is more likely to suffer damage than newer slate. As slate ages and deteriorates, less impact energy is required for hail to damage it.

Many slates such as Pennsylvania slate are weaker or softer slate. The life expectancy for a Pennsylvania slate roof is 40 to 50 years. This slate is of a lower S2 quality (slate types are graded by ASTM Standards, S1 being the highest grade). Pennsylvania slate is typically damaged easily by hail, especially slate that has been on a roof for over 50 years. Hail damaged roofs, if not replaced or repaired, can lead to many issues. You have one year from the date of the loss (the hail event) to file a claim.
